20,000 SEE GREAT GAME

Harvard and Brown Battle in Stadium Before Vast Throng Under Brilliant Skies—Crimson Has Crippled Team.

THE STADIUM, Soldiers Field, Oct. 31.—Crimson and Brown banners waved defiance at each other, and a mighty yell arose from 20,000 throats as Harvard and Brown trotted into the centre of the great amphitheatre to-day to fight their annual gridiron battle.

The cool, crisp air of a perfect football day had keyed both teams up to their best fettle. The rival rooters bent forward in keen anticipation as the opposing players squared themselves for the opening scrimmage.

The Crimson team had no decided advantages, as it had expected have a few days previous to the game. Although it had been toughened by the gruelling at the hands of the Navy, the absence of Captain Burr, seriously injured in the shoulder the day before the game, and of Hoar, whose knee had not yet mended, greatly weakened the Crimson eleven. The Crimson supporters did not expect to win by a large score, but they expected to win and that easily, despite the fact that Brown had just missed winning last year.

Kennard, who has exhibited at times a punting ability almost equal to that of Burr, was put in at fullback to keep up the punting end in the absence of the Crimson captain.

Strong Defence Expected.

McGuire, with his 200 odd pounds of beef, was placed in the line at Burr's position at left guard, and a strong defence was expected in this part of the line. Dunlap went into Hoar's position. That old standby, Crowley, the Cambridge boy, was on deck as usual and prepared to show the Providence boys things that they hadn't learned in college. Cutler received another chance to make good in quarter after his poor work in the Navy game. Nourse was ready to make his fourth steal of the year, but Smith and Forscheimer did not appear in the lineup on account of injuries.

Mayhew, Brown's Star.

The tower of strength of the Brown lineup was Mayhew, the left halfback of the Brown and an all-round player of many years' experience on the gridiron. The Brown team was further materially strengthened by the presence of Dennie in his old position at left end. The Crimson watched this fast, accurate end as closely as his reputation deserved. Another speedy man, Regnier, the Dorchester boy, held down right end.

The Crimson cheering section practised their songs and yells for the Yale game, and the Providence rooters, 5,000 strong, answered with cheers for the Brown and victory.

SHERMAN IN BOOK REFUTES J. H. VAHEY

Angered at Attorney James H. Vahey's interview in which the attorney sought to throw both directly and by inference some responsibility upon Judge Edgar J. Sherman for the failure of Tucker to take the witness stand, Judge Sherman in his book of memoirs sharply repudiates Vahey's interview and declares it to be false. Judge Sherman devotes one chapter of his book, which deals with his life as a jurist, to the Tucker case.

The judge in that chapter of his book which treats of the Tucker case declares that he would not have referred to the failure of Tucker to take the stand but for Attorney Vahey's statement published in the Globe of June 12, 1906.

"Judge Sherman asked me if I wanted any advice from him in the matter" (as to Tucker testifying), Vahey was quoted as saying. This is the statement to which the judge takes strenuous objection.

Anxious, as he states in the book, to correct any apprehension among his friends of the bench and bar that he had been interfering in any way with the defence, Judge Sherman had a statement specially prepared and signed by himself, and Judge Henry N. Sheldon, now Supreme Court justice, as well as Sheriff John R. Fairbairn, subscribed to the falsity of the Vahey statement.

In the statement refuting Vahey's interview, Judge Sherman declares that it was Vahey who approached the judge and asked for his advice, and he is borne out by the other signatories to the statement, Judge Sheldon and Sheriff Fairbairn.

Because of public interest excited by the chapter in Judge Sherman's book, in which he denies and refutes statements with reference to the Tucker case made by Mr. Vahey, Judge Sherman caused the following official document to be issued at the Court House in Pemberton square this afternoon:

"An interview between Judge Sherman and a Boston reporter which took place several weeks ago.

"Reporter—Judge Sherman, are you willing we should publish what you say in your book concerning the advice to Mr. Vahey about putting Tucker on the witness stand?

"Judge Sherman—No. It ought not to be published, and especially at this time, while Mr. Vahey is running for a political office. It was in the nature of a private conversation. It was put in the book, so if at some future time, it became important, it would be preserved as a part of the history of the trial.

"Reporter—Do you think Mr. Vahey intended to tell a falsehood or deceive the public in his article in the Globe?

"Judge Sherman—No, I have regarded Mr. Vahey an an honorable man.

"Reporter—Yes, but the memorandum signed by you, Judge Sheldon and the sheriff shows that his statement in the Globe article is not true.

"Judge Sherman—But you must remember that Mr. Vahey was a young attorney with a great responsibility resting upon him in that trial. He has been severely criticised for not putting Tucker on the witness stand. As soon as Tucker was dead, he published that statement immediately without carefully considering all the facts. Of course, I should not have volunteered advice under such circumstances as he relates, and while he is in error about the facts which are related in the Globe article, I think it happened as I have suggested."

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Princeton's Tigers had their chance to show to-day what they could do on the gridiron against the Army eleven.

The time is nearing when the crucial football struggles will take place, and there is so much uncertainty as to the respective merits of the several teams of the "Big Three" and the Army and Navy that to-day's contests between Princeton and the soldier boys, and Carlisle against the Navy, take on great importance and intense interest.

The Navy team has shown up with remarkable strength, although not unexpected, for the Middies have gone steadily to the front during the past three years. So that this year many football experts do not hesitate to give them credit for being about as strong as any eleven in the country. There are many ups and downs in football, as in other sports, and the result of the game in Annapolis this afternoon will possibly afford many angles of argument.

Both the Army men and the Tigers have held themselves in check more or less so far, but they were forced to show their hands and speed to-day. The full strength of both teams should be brought out, for both had out their strongest elevens and both were anxious to make the best showing that was in their makeup.

Of course, it will be the Tigers' supreme object to excel Yale's score against the Army just two weeks ago, and they will not be at all backward in piling up a few more points if it can be done.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 31.—Winding up the sure-thing games on her football schedule, Yale met the Amherst Aggies here to-day in the first game ever played between the two colleges. The "Aggies" were trimmed up close last week by Williams, 40 to 0, and Yale wanted to equal that figure, although the Aggies looked more formidable to-day than the score indicated. As the Springfield Training School beat the Aggies 6 to 0 after Princeton had downed Springfield 18 to 0, Yale's visitors were rated far from top-notchers. Yet Yale sent against them what is probably the nearest approach to the team which will face Princeton two weeks from to-day which has been put on the gridiron this season. Logan and Bingham were in bad shape to-day and Head Coach Biglow thought that both were likely to retire after several minutes' play and that Freeman of the third eleven and Pop Corey of the second be given a chance at the agriculturalists.

Crisp football weather brought a big crowd and the Yale brass band was on the job again with campaign airs of both the political and gridiron variety. The Yale coaches planned to shoot the heavy linemen through as much of the play as they could stand to test their endurance, and Hobbs and Andrus, who have been in only a single game this season because of injuries, were closely watched for a line on their staying power.

Robert J. McCartney, who was the New England president of the iron-molders when Eben S. Draper broke his pledge to the molders and ordered his employes to withdraw from the union, says:

Every workingman who wishes to make his protest against Eben S. Draper most effective will vote for William N. Osgood, the candidate of the Independence League, for Governor.

Keliher Foe of Eight-Hour Day and Pure Food Bills--Auerbach

Junius T. Auerbach, speaking in East Boston, last night called on John A. Keliher to tell his constituents in the Ninth District why he offered in Congress a resolution against the eight-hour day for government workmen.

The Independence League nominee defied the three-time Congressman to explain why on every great question involving the people's rights he had been found invariably lined up with the trusts.

Mr. Auerbach spoke in Commonwealth Hall. It was the largest and most enthusiastic rally of his campaign, the auditorium being filled to the doors. Mr. Auerbach was greeted with cheers as he entered. Applause followed the telling points of his address, and as he concluded he was repeatedly cheered.

The "rough house" tactics attempt of of some Keliher supporters brought from Mr. Auerbach the sally that attempts to break up the rally were on par with the Keliher tactics in Charlestown a few evenings ago when his transparency wagon was damaged by a brick, hurled by a Keliher sympathizer.

Not a Denial Heard.

"I have told of John A. Keliher's votes on measures in which the trusts were interested," he said, "and not one denial of anything that can be proved has come from him. John A. Keliher does not dare to present his own record to his own constituents, for his record is simply a record of high crimes and misdemeanors against the interests of the people. I dare him to produce his record.

"He took the stump last night and made a whirlwind tour through many of the Boston wards. But what did he tell you? Did he tell you why he voted for the bill incorporating the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company—the Whitney bill? Did he tell you why he dodged the vote on investigating the telephone monopoly? Did he tell you why he voted 'no' on the bill to establish a uniform railroad rate of 2 cents a mile throughout Massachusetts? Did he tell you why he voted against requiring street railway companies to place vestibules on their cars? These were his votes cast in the House of Representatives of Massachusetts.

"And did he tell you why, as a Senator, he voted against the corrupt practices act? Did he tell you why he voted against the bill making it possible for the rugged, ambitious sons of mechanics and artisans to receive manual training in our public schools? And this bill was killed by his vote, 13 to 12. Did he tell you why he voted against playgrounds for the city of Boston? Did he tell you that he as a member of Congress presented a resolution opposing the passage of any anti-injunction bill?

Fought Eight-Hour Day.

"Did he tell you why he presented a resolution in Congress opposing the bill making eight hours a day on government projects a day's work? Did he tell you why he voted against the pure food bill at all stages of its passage? Did he tell you why he opposed the building of battleships, a measure that would take from the streets of Charlestown its idle mechanics—men ready, willing and anxious to work?

"Did he tell you why he dodged the vote on the exclusion of Japanese workmen from the continental possessions of the United States, and registered in the Congress of the people his assent to a ninety-cent a day wage in the building of the Panama Canal? (Applause.)

"Did he tell you why he dodged the vote on the question of passing the bill recommending that trainmen on interstate commerce trains might not be compelled to work more than sixteen hours in twenty-four?

"Did he tell you why he introduced a resolution against the establishment of the parcels post, a measure favored by the Postmaster General of the United States, desired by the people of the country, and opposed only by the four concerns making up the express monopoly in the United States?

"Did John A. Keliher explain to you last night his votes upon any one of these important measures? Did John A. Keliher deny last night that he had voted just as I have declared that he did vote?

Descended to Abuse.

"No, John A. Keliher neither explained nor excused. He could not deny, for the record was there, and in black and white. He descended to abuse. He said that I was a bird that had just flown into the district, but he did not say what kind of a bird I was. He said I had talons. Perhaps I have; but I have never sunk those talons into the women and children of Massachusetts. (Applause.)

"John A. Keliher knows I have talons and his masters of monopoly and corporate greed in Massachusetts know also that I have talons. They have felt those talons for the last five years on Beacon Hill. They don't like those talons and they are afraid of them. Their scars still remain in the hide of the John A. Kelihers.

"Have you heard Keliher tell you any bill in the people's interest that he favored, either on Beacon Hill or in Washington? Have you heard anything like that? No. you'll not hear it either, for John A. Keliher first of all is a politician. It is his only occupation. Barter politics is his stock in trade. I dare him to tell any one measure directly affecting the interests of the people as against the greed of monopoly and corporate interest that he has ever voted for in all his career as a public servant; yet he asks a fourth term in Congress. Leopold Morse did not get a fourth term, and Leopold Morse was a conscientious, conservative, faithful representative. Patrick A. Collins did not get four terms, and no more upright, honest, earnest gentleman ever honored a seat in the Congress of the United States than Patrick A. Collins. (Applause.)

What Auerbach Has Done.

"I have a simple, modest record of service to present. It is a record of service given without pay or price. It is a record of service for the people's interest, for the interest of the oppressed. Every useful measure introduced during the past five years into our State Legislature I have advocated, and every bad measure I have opposed. I secured for the people of Boston eighty cent gas. I opposed biennial elections. The 'interests' do not care to buy legislators every year. I aided in the passage of the Employers' Liability Act, guaranteeing to the toiler, unfortunate enough to be injured in the factories of our Commonwealth, the same consideration, at least, that the broken wheel in the factory receives. The broken wheel is at once repaired.

There has not been a measure of importance to the whole people to which I have not during the past five years given of my time and effort, and given freely." (Applause.)

STOPS FALLING HAIR

Latest Scientific Discovery a Pronounced Success.

It was not until the discovery of Birt's head wash, a short time ago, that there was any known cure for dandruff and its inevitable consequence—falling hair. The public at large had depended upon "tonics" and "invigorators" without number, and always failed to get at the root of the evil—dandruff.

Probably 90 per cent. of the people are afflicted with dandruff, and every one who has it knows how difficult it is to get rid of. Ordinary soaps which contain excess alkali are often the cause of dandruff when used in washing or shampooing the hair and scalp.

The discovery of Birt's head wash and the subsequent decision of its proprietors to distribute it throughout the country through the leading drug stores has caused the public at large to realize its wonderful properties to such an extent that it is to-day sold in greater quantities than any similar preparation for the hair and scalp. It is on sale in Boston at Houghton & Dutton Co.'s, R. H. White Co.'s, the [illegible] Stores and other leading [illegible], for 50c.

Straw Vote in Factory Shows Draper Slump from Taft Vote

A straw vote among the workmen employed in the big Chickering piano factory in the South End shows that Osgood, the Independence party candidate for Governor, receives 46 votes out of a total of 129 votes taken in the straw ballot. This is nearly 36 per cent. of the total. It shows that over one-third of the workmen in the factory are for Osgood and for Independence League principles. Draper, the Republican candidate, receives only 33 votes, or 25 per cent.

The feature of the straw vote is the falling off of the vote for Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper, the Republican candidate for Governor. Draper is third in the State ticket list.

The workmen in this factory are highly skilled and intelligent men, earning good pay, and able, as all skilled men are, to think for themselves. As an indication of the growth of Independence League sentiment among wage-earners of the superior type this straw vote is illuminating.

The result of the vote is:

POSTMISTRESS HOLDUP VICTIM

SHEFFIELD, Mass., Oct. 31.—The police and Federal authorities are to-day running down all available clues which will lead to the capture of the highway who held up and robbed aged Agnes Burtch, the postmistress.

Miss Burtch closed up the postoffice shortly after eight o'clock last night and started for her home, but a few doors distant on Main street, when a masked man grappled with her, wrenching the money bag from her feeble grasp and fled into the night, leaving her half unconscious from fright. Between $200 and $300 was in the bag. The authorities think a local man may have perpetrated the crime.

TAFT GREETED BY FASSETT

ELMIRA, N. Y., Oct. 31.—Mr. Taft began here the last day of his New York stumping. It was also the next to the last day of his six weeks of strenuous campaigning, which has taken him throughout the middle West, through all the border States and through most of the East and South, covering exactly half the State of the Union.

"I am delighted that it is nearly over, and I am confident that the victory is won," said Mr. Taft just before leaving his car.

J. Sloat Fassett met Mr. Taft at the station and a crowd of 6,000 jammed in as close as they could get to a platform erected nearby. They gave Mr. Taft an uproarious reception.

LOSES LONG FIGHT FOR HER FREEDOM

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Cordelia Botkin, who poisoned Mrs. John P. Dunning and her sister of Dover, Del., by sending them poisoned candy from San Francisco, lost her long fight for freedom.

GOMPERS INSINCERE, DECLARES KNOX

PITTSBURG, Oct. 31.—Senator Knox formally arraigned Samuel Gompers' anti-Taft arguments in a convincing speech before 2,000 people at North Side Carnegie Hall. Speaking for himself as former Attorney-General and for President Roosevelt and William H. Taft, the Pittsburg Senator denounced Mr. Gompers' position as insincere and Mr. Bryan's and the Democratic party's as evasive.

YALE DOCKS UNINJURED BY BATTLE WITH STORM

With hardly a scratch to show the terrific experience she had been through, the steamer Yale of the Metropolitan line landed her passengers safely at 8:15 o'clock this morning, a little more than twenty-four hours behind schedule time for arriving in Boston.

"It was a little the toughest weather I've ever seen, and I've been batting around this coast for thirty years," was Captain J. A. Thompson's graphic description of his experience.

"The passengers were not at all frightened," he said. "When we turned about off Nobska light about 10 o'clock yesterday morning the weather was frightful. The wind was roaring along not less than a hundred miles an hour. The seas were the highest I've ever seen in Massachusetts Bay.

"The Yale rolled in the trough of the sea, but the turbines were steadying and she came out magnificently. Once we got headed into the seas she was superb. She's a new ship, and I didn't know how she'd act in a big blow.

"But she's certainly a bird. I never saw anything like her in my life.

Passengers Not Alarmed.

"I could probably have come through all right, but with so many passengers aboard I did not care to take the chance. The passengers were apparently not at all alarmed. But then, passengers never realize the situation in such a case."

C. T. Eldred of New York, speaking for the passengers, said: "We were not frightened except when they turned around in the storm. It seemed as if the Yale was going to roll over. Her funnels were at an acute angle with the water, and she rolled terribly. Then a big wave hit us a smashing blow, and the women screamed in terror. But once Captain Thompson got her righted she went ahead again like a yacht.

"When it cleared a bit after we got anchored we found several other steamers in the same fix and had lots of fun sympathizing with them by wireless and they with us. We sent wireless messages to our relatives from time to time and they were mightily relieved I tell you. That wireless is great in such a time.

"The women took things calmly once we got anchored and visited and worked on the sewing and all that. The men had their little poker games and once there was a ballot by a small group on the election. It stood 18 for Taft and 8 for Bryan.

Memorial to Captain.

The following memorial was signed by every passenger on board: "We are on board the S. S. Yale, the night of October 30th, 1908. We, the undersigned passengers desire to record our appreciation of the efficiency, seamanship and courtesy of Captain Thompson during the heavy weather off Cape Cod on this our eastbound journey on the night of October 29th and we feel that his good judgment in turning back to shelter and thereby avoiding the possibility of danger calls for our hearty commendation. We are, therefore, pleased to subscribe our names in a slight token of our regard and esteem."

Not more than ten or twelve friends and relatives were at the pier when the Yale came in. This was because all had received wireless messages saying that everybody was safe and there was no need to worry.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 31.—The northern half of Indiana claimed Mr. Bryan's attention to-day, nineteen stops being scheduled for his special train, which will end its trip at Chicago to-night. Mr. Bryan's first speech was at Union City. Other cities included in the list are Winchester, Richmond, Newcastle, Muncie, Anderson, Kokomo, Peru and South Bend.

Mr. Bryan told his hearers of conditions in New York, and warned Democrats that the Republicans with their big fund, the source of which they would not make public, would try to buy the election, especially in Indiana.

WORTHY NOMINEES ON LEAGUE TICKET

From top to bottom: John E. Dempsey, Emil Brietenbach, William P. Sawyer and John F. Williams.

JOHN E. DEMPSEY.

John E. Dempsey of Fall River, Independence League candidate for State auditor, is going to receive a great deal of support from influential sources. He would be a good man to put in the office of State auditor.

In the first place, he is honest. He has executive capacity and he is firmly of the belief that it is time there was an investigation of the State auditor's office.

Mr. Dempsey was born in Taunton in 1870, but has been a resident of Fall River for many years. He is one of the most active members of the Street Railway Men's Union and he has been indorsed by that union in an appeal calling upon all members of organized labor to vote for him.

He led the big fight of the Freight Handlers in Fall River in 1890 and won it. He has been a member of the Fall River Central Labor Union for many years and has faithfully attended the meetings of the City Government, keeping watch of the acts of members on questions affecting the interests of organized labor and the common people.

He is a member of Division 11, A. O. H., of the Union Club, and the Lenox and Columbian Athletic clubs.

During the big strike of mill operatives in '04 and '05 he raised about $1,500 for the workers and gained their lasting gratitude.

EMIL J. BREITENBACH.

Emil J. Breitenbach of Ward 22, candidate for the House, is one of the best-known residents in the Jamaica Plain District. He is a member of various German societies and a veteran of the German and American navies. He is well versed in the needs of Jamaica Plain from his experience in the real estate business.

Personally he is a forceful and rugged character. He believes in the principles of his party, which means that he would be on the people's side of public questions if a member of the House of Representatives. He has always taken an active interest in politics, but has never been a candidate for public office before.

He was for years a Republican of independent tendencies and is a member of the Independent Club of Ward 22. At present Mr. Breitenbach is engaged in the insurance business. It is predicted that he will be elected because of his large circle of personal friends.

WILLIAM P. SAWYER.

William P. Sawyer, candidate of the Independence League for Senator in the Seventh Suffolk district, is by far the best man nominated to represent the people of Wards 18, 19 and 22 in the upper branch of the Legislature.

He is a university and law school graduate, and has a good practice. Mr. Sawyer has the distinction of being the first man to become enrolled in the Independence League party of Boston. Last year, running as a League candidate for Senator, he polled a large vote. This year, with the people understanding the true conditions better than they did a year ago, he ought to be elected.

John J. Butler, the present Senator, is seemingly little more than an errand boy for the Boston Elevated. He has not acted in the interest of the men employed by the Elevated, but voted for special privileges that this public service corporation demanded.

Butler never speaks during debate in the Senate on any measure, whether it be in the interests of the people or the corporations. He isn't there to speak, simply to vote for the corporations.

The fight is between Butler and Sawyer. The Republican candidate and the Independent Democrat have no chance. If the voters of the district would redeem it from the hands of the traction trust and have their own interests represented they should vote for William P. Sawyer.

His picture will not be found in the store windows and his virtues will not be paraded on the billboards, but if elected to the Senate he will be found speaking and voting for the best interests of the district.

JOHN F. WILLIAMS.

John F. Williams of Waltham, candidate for Secretary of State, comes of an old New England family that traces its American ancestry back to Plymouth Rock in 1620. He is a believer in true Democracy. The public schools of the "Watch City" gave him his education.

He is First Lieutenant in Company F, Fifth Regiment, and an expert rifleman, having won a place on the State rifle team two successive years. During the Spanish War he served as a private in Company D, Eighth Regiment, and did special duty with Brigadier-General Wattes. For a time he was in charge of the headquarters in Cuba of Brigadier-General Sanger, with whom he served until the close of the war.

Lieutenant Williams was a member of the Populist party in 1892 and for most of his voting age has been identified with reform politics. He was treasurer of the Wakefield Populist Club in 1894 and '95 and later president of a similar association in Lynn.

In 1904 he was an Independent candidate for the Legislature and endorsed by the Democrats. Believing that the Democratic party deserted the people by abandoning most of the planks in its platform that the people favored, Mr. Williams joined the Independence League and has been one of its most valued workers. He is a member of Isaac Parker Lodge of Masons. He is employed as an accountant by the Howard Watch Company.

FAMOUS LYNN BANKER DEAD

LYNN, Oct. 31.—Benjamin W. Currier, president of the Lynn Manufacturers' National Bank, millionaire philanthropist and prominent in the social and business life of this city, died suddenly at his Summer home at Wenham this morning, the immediate cause of death being acute indigestion.

Mr. Currier retired as well as ever last night, and his death comes as a shock to the city, as he was one of the best liked and most widely known men in Lynn. He was seventy-one years old, had been married twice, and, in addition to his bank connections in Lynn, was one of the heaviest stockholders of the Continental Clothing Company of the city of Boston. The funeral announcements will be given out later.

ALL DIOCESAN ORDERS IN CENTENARY PAGEANT

PRIESTS, MONKS AND NUNS, IN FULL ROBES, FORM IMPOSING PROCESSION AT CATHEDRAL.

Second only in splendor and picturesqueness to the magnificent pageant of prelates that proceeded in full ecclesiastical robes before the public on Wednesday, the opening day of the centenary of the Roman Catholic diocese of Boston, was the gathering to-day in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

All the religious orders in the dioceses were represented, and about 600 members of the various orders were present. All the priests, monks and nuns were garbed in their full robes, and made a most imposing pageant as they arrived at the Cathedral and were seated in the body of the church.

The sisters of the various communities assembled in the basement of the Cathedral, and promptly at 10 o'clock proceeded to Union Park street and entered the main entrance of the Cathedral. The priests, monks and brothers, assembled in the vestries and proceeded up stairs, and took their places in the body of the church.

This is Religious Orders Day in the celebration of the centenary. At the solemn high mass Bishop G. A. Guertin of Manchester, N. H., was the celebrant. The special intention of this mass was to implore God's blessing on the religious men and women who are working in the diocese and to implore mercy on the souls of the religious who labored and died here.

At the mass the assistant priest to Bishop Guertin was Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College. The deacon was Rev. Henry de La Chapelle, S. M., of the Church of Notre Dame, Isabella street, and the sub-deacon was Rev. John R. McRory, O. M. I., of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Lowell. The chaplains to the archbishop were Rev. DARTMOUTH COACH TO WED SALEM GIRL

SALEM, Oct. 31.—Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Helen Jackson Raymond of this city to Dr. John C. O'Connor of Manchester, N. H., to take place in Salem, Tuesday, November 17.

The wedding will be the culmination of a romance which began in Salem Hospital when Dr. O'Connor was an interne there, and Miss Raymond was a nurse.

Dr. O'Connor is a graduate of Dartmouth and a former captain of the football team. He is at present coach of the Dartmouth team.

Miss Raymond is the youngest daughter of ex-Mayor John M. Raymond and graduated from Salem High School in 1899, and was salutatorian of her class. She then went to Bryn Mawr College. She is an expert tennis player and golfer, and is fond of out-door amusements.

TURK TROOP SHOT DOWN TO END MUTINY

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 31.—A threatened outbreak on the part of a company of Turkish troops attached to the garrison at Yildiz Kiosk was promptly put down to-day with a single volley from a loyal battalion. Three of the mutineers were killed and fifteen were wounded.

Two battalions have arrived from Salonica, replacing their comrades of the Imperial guard, who had been dispatched to Monastir.

In all Turkish political centres visited during the Bairam fetes it was noted that satisfaction is expressed at the increasing animosity of the Russian government and people for Austria-Hungary, the hope being expressed that the dual monarchy's act of spoliation of the Slav people would not leave Russia a simple spectator.

TENANTS GET BAD SCARE AT MORNING FIRE

Thirty-nine people sleeping in tenement houses on Arlington avenue, Charlestown, were thrown into a panic and, wearing only their nightclothing, fled into the street early this morning, when two alarms were rung in for a fire in the three-story wooden building at No. 100 Arlington avenue. At No. 99, directly across the street from the fire, live Mrs. Harry Hurley and five sons, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Haggerty, seven children, and Mrs. Haggerty's brother, and Mr. and Mrs. William Laquarrie and seven children. Awakened by the whistles of engines and ringing of bells on the engines, they rushed from their rooms believing that the tenement house was on fire. Some appeared carrying valuables that they had seized as they rushed from the building.

At the corner of Arlington avenue and Fred street Mrs. Mary Berry and her five children and Mr. and Mrs. William Morass and six children, rushed out in terror.

Soon after the second alarm was run in the firemen got the flames under control.

The building where the fire started was occupied by J. Rush Greene, T. H. Rideout and E. W. Chapman, woodworkers. The fire is believed to have started on the lowest floor near the rear of the building. The cause is unknown. Damage is estimated at $5,000.

RIOTOUS FAREWELL TO OLD CURB

As the bells and whistles announced noon to-day, the Boston Curb Brokers bade a riotous farewell to Exchange Place.

Monday morning they resume their operations at their new market on the curb of Doane street.

Theirs was no tearful farewell to the vicinage where they have disported so playfully in the past years. About ten minutes before noon, one broker, bubbling over with enthusiasm, yelled "Whoop-ee" and brought both fists down on his partner's new derby. After extracting his head from the hat sufficiently to be able to see and hear, the partner went abroad with blood in his eye and deceivingly bland smile on his face. The war was on and for the concluding ten minutes until noon derbys and breakable hats were hunted, yea, even trailed, until finally they lay discarded in the gutter beneath the feet of their owners.

The last minute before noon resulted in the busiest trading in months, all the brokers holding their orders until the last moment in order to have the most exciting wind-up possible.

Shortly after 12 o'clock Charles Austin announced that at 12:30 there would be a meeting of the curb brokers, at which Thomas Lawson would be present.

BOY ENDS LIFE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Unable to obtain an education because of defective eyesight, and discouraged at the prospect of spending his life at hard toil, Charles Smith ended his life at No. 297 Bridge street, Brooklyn.

LOCATE GIRL WHO JILTED HUB FIANCE

Miss Margaret Mahoney of No. 270 Highland avenue, Malden, who three weeks ago jilted her fiance, Frank Santo and then left home, has been located in Philadelphia, where she has secured work. Although the banns had been published and friends invited to the wedding, Miss Mahoney changed her mind and the marriage did not occur. The next day she disappeared.

She has written to her family that she does not intend to return to Malden, where she was born and brought up.

CHINESE DINE ON FLAGSHIP

AMOY, Oct. 31.—A luncheon to Chinese officers and a public reception were given on board Rear Admiral Emory's flagship, the Louisiana, to-day. The American bluejackets engaged in games in the recreation park in the afternoon, and there were lavish entertainments and a grand dinner in Chinese style for the officers in the evening.

UNCLE SAM GETS AFTER THE B. & A.

On complaint of Henry N. Chase, a junior engineer of the War Department, the New York Central was to-day charged with obstructing the navigable waters of Chelsea Creek, before United States Commissioner Hayes.

During the big Chelsea fire in April the Boston & Albany bridge across the creek was burned. It was replaced in three days with another bridge on piles, in which no provision was made for a draw. The railroad has since been promising to remedy this condition, but has not done so, and the War Department took action. The case has been set for a hearing November 7.

ASSETS HIDDEN, SAY CREDITORS

Charles C. Milton of Worcester was appointed receiver for Louis Rottstein, proprietor of the two Economy Stores of Worcester, by Judge Dodge in the United States District Court to-day.

Rottstein was petitioned into bankruptcy by a number of creditors on Thursday. The liabilities are estimated at $30,000 and the assets at $10,000, consisting of dry goods, etc.

At the hearing to-day counsel for creditors stated that Rottstein had made several large purchases a few weeks ago in New York, but that a visit to the store failed to disclose these purchases. The court was asked to order an investigation as to the whereabouts of the goods.

HELD FOR DOUBLE HOLD-UP IN HOUR

Joseph Petonte and Frederick Colagero of Nashua street, Boston, were held in bonds of $2,000 to-day in the Municipal Court on charges of highway robbery and assault on Joseph P. Murray of No. 607 Main street, Winchester. Murray claims the men held him up twice within an hour. The first hold-up, he says, was on Stanilford street, where the men forced him into a doorway and took his money, amounting to $8.25. Later, he says, the men chased him down Causeway street and repeated the attack, driving him into a doorway and taking his watch and mileage book.

OSTEOPATH IS SENT TO JAIL IN MEDICINE CASE

John A. Taff, an osteopath, was found guilty by a jury in the Superior Criminal Court, Judge Schofield presiding, of practicing medicine without having been registered as a physician to-day. His conviction is due to his alleged attempt to get $2,000 from Mrs. F. S. Tucker of No. 98 Gainsboro street, Back Bay.

Having heard of the wonderful cures said to have been wrought by Taff, she went to him and agreed to give him $2,000 to effect a cure of her malady—a nervous trouble. For this she agreed to give him a certified check for $1,000 in three days and a similar sum in a fortnight. Before she turned the check over to him a relative made an inquiry about him and then complained to the State Board of Medicine.

Lawyer Harvey H. Pratt said he would appeal, and will ask the Supreme Court to pass on an osteopath's right to prescribe simple remedies to his patients.

Taff's bondsman surrendered him and he was sent to jail pending the sentence. He may either be fined or imprisoned or both.

HAYDEN TREASURER OF EASTERN S. S. CO.

At a meeting of directors of the Eastern Steamship Company to-day Galen L. Stone, of Hayden, Stone & Co., was elected a director, and Josiah W. Hayden was elected treasurer. This action is believed to foreshadow the retention by the Consolidated Steamship line or its successor of a very large, but not a controlling interest in the Eastern Steamship Company.

WILL TONE UP YOUR STOMACH AND CURE ALL INDIGESTION PROMPTLY

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach trouble is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should eat Diapepsin after meals, and there will be no more Indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, Sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Vomiting, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after eating one Triangule of Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

ALIENATION SUIT RAISES BRIDAL TANGLE

R. C. Guptill, Sued by Barenteen, Charges Latter Not Married to Malden Woman.

FILES ANSWER IN COURT

Denying every allegation in the suit brought against him for $50,000 damages by Frank E. Barentzen, a Malden photographer, on a charge of alienating Mrs. Barentzen's affections, Robert C. Guptill, a wealthy Malden contractor, to-day, in his answer in the Middlesex Superior Court, declares that Barentzen and Grace L. Harding, called Mrs. Grace L. Barentzen, were not married on November 11, 1891.

In the answer to the suit for $50,000 for the alleged alienation of Mrs. Barentzen's affections, Mr. Guptill, through his Attorney Charles R. Elder, No. 209 Washington street, Boston, demands that in the coming trial Barentzen prove that he was legally married to Grace L. Barentzen and that she is his lawful wife.

Mr. Guptill also claims that prior to the bringing of the suit that Barentzen abandoned and deserted the said Grace L. Barentzen. He alleges that on November 11, 1891, the date of the alleged marriage of Barentzen, that Barentzen, the plaintiff, was the husband of another woman, Adela Patino Diaz.

He charges that Barentzen married Miss Diaz in October of 1878. He charges that Grace L. Barentzen was not on June 1, 1904, nor at any time between that date and the date the suit was brought, August 29 last, wife of Frank E. Barentzen, the plaintiff, but that Adela Patino Diaz Barentzen was his wife.

DARK MYSTERY ON RUG THEFT IN HOTEL LENOX

Management Puzzled by the Strange Disappearance of Tiger Skin and Its Return.

The management of the fashionable Hotel Lenox in the Back Bay has a mystery on its hands, in which a valuable leopard skin figures.

The following advertisement appeared in to-day papers:

"The management of the Hotel Lenox wishes to take this, the only means possible, of expressing its gratitude to the unknown lady who returned the leopard skin recently purloined from the writing room of the hotel."

Who took the skin, which is perfectly marked and worth $125, and who returned it is not known. It was taken from the hotel in a mysterious manner and returned in the same way.

Henry L. Merry, manager of the Lenox, when seen by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day said: "Two weeks ago we purchased a large number of Bengal tiger and leopard skins. One of these was placed in the writing room on the first floor of the Boylston street side. Three or four days later we suddenly discovered that it had mysteriously disappeared.

"The next morning a lady called up the hotel by 'phone. She said that two young men friends came to her home late the previous night and laid a leopard skin on the floor. She said they finally told her they took it from the Hotel Lenox.

"We waited for several days, but the skin did not come back. Then stories appeared, saying that detectives had been put on the case.

"The next we heard was when the housekeeper came running into my office with the missing skin. It had been left at the hotel very mysteriously.

"In all probability the skin was taken by some young men who had been at dinner in the hotel. They probably were feeling in good spirits and perhaps took the rug away under their coat as a joke."

PITTSFIELD WELCOMES LEADERS OF NEW PARTY

ROBERT J. M'CARTNEY SHOWS HOW OLD PARTIES HAD BETRAYED WORKINGMEN.

PITTSFIELD, Oct. 31.—The Independence party held a rally in Eagle's Hall last night, and although the first of its history the attendance was beyond the hopes of the new party's most ardent supporters and the enthusiasm was unbounded, especially when the names of Thomas L. Hisgen and William R. Hearst were mentioned.

The speakers were William N. Osgood, Independence League candidate for Governor; Robert J. McCartney, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and Richard J. Talbot of Springfield, candidate for Attorney-General.

Joseph Horan, chairman of the Independence City Committee, presided, and before introducing the speakers urged the voters not to forget that the Independence party stood for all that was good and not for corruption, as do the old line parties.

Party for the Labor Man.

Robert J. McCartney said in part:

"I have joined the Independence party because I am thoroughly convinced that it is the party of the working man. I have been active in the organized labor movements for sixteen years, a portion of which time, namely, eight years, I was executive head of the Ironmolders of New England, so that I feel I am competent to look at the situation from the standpoint of organized labor.

"On the other hand, I am equally convinced that the Independence party is the party of the unorganized labor. During my conection with the trades union movement, I have been in a position to see the treatment dealt out to the workingmen by the old political parties and by their spokesmen of the daily press.

"It is time that a political party came into existence in which the working classes were given the consideration due them as the chief producers of the wealth and the chief basis of the prosperity of the nation.

"I, myself, had a personal experience with the industrial attitude of Mr. Eben S. Draper, and also with the good faith which he showed in his treatment of the working classes.

How Draper Tricked Labor Men.

"In October, 1905, Mr. Draper, when a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor for the first time, asked for a conference with the officials of the Iron Molders' Union of North America. The conferors were the president and vice-president of the National Organization of Iron Molders, the New England organizer, a brother molder from Fall River and myself.

"The conference was brought about by a friend of Governor Guild. Mr. Draper asked for the conference, he said, to adjust the condition of the molder at Hopedale.

"At the conference he said that he knew nothing of the tyrannical treatment of the molder at Hopedale. He said that he would remove all obstacles as to organizing the molders there. He went further and offered to take our officers to Hopedale to show that he was friendly toward the union and escort them through the plant.

"We told him that this was unnecessary, and that the best way to prove his friendliness would be to put his promises into practice. When our organizer went to Hopedale he learned that the men had been notified that if they joined the Molders' Union they would cease to be employes in the Draper plant.

Mr. Draper promised the officials of the Molder's Union that he would allow the men to be organized, but he threatened the men that if they joined the union they would lose their jobs in the Draper plant.

Osgood Points Out Need of Independence Party

The speech of William N. Osgood at Pittsfield rally follows:

"An old friend of mine, a prominent Democrat in Massachusetts, met me on the train from Boston to-day, and remarked that there was great confusion in political issues and party lines at the present time, and that we would all be together one of these days.

"Then he looked wise, and I began to think about the lion and the lamb and wondered whether he thought the Democratic party was the lion or the lamb—the assimilator or the assimilated. I finally concluded that the Independence party which I represented was not a lamb, and would be found on the outside when the wish of my friend should be realized.

"Thoughtless men say, what is the use of forming a party so strongly in favor of popular government as the Independence party?

"The answer is because it is absolutely impossible to secure fair consideration at the hands of legislators in Washington or in the State when popular measures are presented to them.

"That is the experience which many of us have had when appearing before legislative committees and advocating direct legislation, for example, or public opinion bills, or a better control of public utilities and the like.

Where People Stand.

"The first thing the chairman of the committee does is to look us over and size us up. We are asked our names and whom we represent. If an individual so appearing replies: 'I am a citizen and represent myself,' how much attention does he receive?

"The members of the committee yawn and think of the many citizens whom they represent, and how much more competent they are to consider and pass upon public questions than any ordinary citizen who voluntarily appears before them in a fancied interest in behalf of the public.

"They remind me of a fight champion in his palmiest days who, when a fourth-rate pugilist challenged him for the championship, he, with a proud wave of the hand, told the challenged first to go and get a record and support.

"That is what the Independence party is trying to do, and it is succeeding remarkably well. It recognized the necessity of being able to say to Legislatures, both State and National, we represent something besides ourselves, as individuals, we represent thousands, yea, even millions in this great country, who are in favor of real and literal popular government and they insist upon being heard and considered, though the heavens fall.

"The scorn and contempt with which the mis-representatives of the people have met all efforts of individual citizens, when petitioning for popular reforms, has proved the absolute necessity for a permanent political organization in this republic which shall unswervingly represent the citizens whose interests are different from those of trusts and monopolies.

The Man and the Tree.

"The Independence party is rapidly becoming such a political force. Its growth is natural and permanent. It has already outgrown the infancy stages. It is rapidly attaining an age of full strength.

"The oak has a small beginning, but in comparatively short time becomes strong enough to withstand the elements. So it will be with the new party.

"This recalls to my mind an anecdote which I read the other day. It was told by Mr. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League. A man out West was caught horse stealing. The vigilance committee told him they had found him guilty, and that he would be hung in five minutes.

"They also told him he would be given the privilege of choosing the tree. 'All right,' he said, 'I'll take a gooseberry tree.' 'But that is not strong enough to support you,' the committee replied. 'Oh, I'm in no hurry; I'll wait till it grows,' the man answered.

Death to the Trusts.

"It will not be necessary for the trusts and monopolies to wait for us to grow. We are no small bush, but already a sturdy tree, of which they are becoming speedily aware.

"We do not threaten to hang the promoters of trusts and monopolies to Independence trees, but we would like to strangle their iniquitous creations.

"The days of the plutocracy are numbered in this great republic, and the principles and ideals of the new party are bound to move on until the full and complete fruition of popular government shall be realized."

Don't Grow Up Too Soon

There's a Time Limit on Youth and It Never Returns

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I KNOW a little girl who just can't wait to be grown up. When her older sister goes to a dinner or a dance the little maid sits and watches her dress; and every few minutes she says, with a long-drawn sigh, "Oh, dear! I do wish I were grown up and could wear a train and go to balls."

With every new dress she begs to have the skirt lengthened, and if she had her way she would pile all her pretty, curly hair on top of her head.

Fortunately, she has a wise mother, who believes in keeping little girls young as long as possible, and so the chances are that Nancy will not grow up before her time.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

There are a great many little Nancy maidens who are longing to cross the dividing line between girlhood and young ladyhood, and the dear babies do not realise that once they cross that line they can never retrace their steps.

If you only knew, little women, how deliciously irresponsible the school days are, you would not be in such a hurry to run away from them.

Youth All Too Short at Best

If your lives are spared, you are going to be grown up for a great many years. There is no time limit, but old age, to being grown up.

But the time limit to being a little girl is very brief, and it races along, just eating up the glad hours and days.

Hold fast to girlhood. It will leave you soon enough, and the days will come when you would give all you own for just one day of its care-free joyousness.

The young girl receives a tender homage that is never given to any one else. Her youth and innocence are worshipped and protected.

There is no one more charming than the modest, well-bred little girl who is free from affectations and content to be a little girl. But the moment she begins to ape her elders, and to try and act like a grown woman, she loses her charm.

Wear your hair in a braid as long as you can, for once it goes up it will have to stay up.

Enjoy Girlhood While It Lasts

If your frocks are dressy and overtrimmed, you will look ridiculous. The more simply you are dressed, the more girlish and pretty you will look.

There are thousands of little girls who are longing to be grown women, but there are tens of thousands of grown women who long to be little girls again.

Stay a little girl just as long as you can, and make up your mind to be just the nicest kind of a little girl.

Don't spend your time thinking about beaux and clothes, but romp and play and get all the fun and fresh air and exercise you can.

The sweeter and truer little girl you are the better and more attractive woman you will grow into.

Stay young, little girlies, just as long as you can, and be content to look the part. Age and all its responsibilities will come soon enough.

His Chance to Marry

Evvy's Pa Was Willing, but Clarence Welched

By KENNETT HARRIS

MACKELDOWNIE, having listened to the end with an air of kindly interest, cleared his throat and crossed one plump leg over the other, which last action was in some degree reassuring to the dapper young man who had just declared his sentiments of undying affection for Miss Mackeldownie.

"You seem rather nervous, Clarence," remarked the old gentleman. "I am afraid somebody has been misrepresenting me to you. I am not a violent man, Clarence, far from it. If you have been led to believe that I would fly into a passion and assault you you have been imposed upon. I'm not going to strain you to my bosom and shed tears of joy down the back of your neck, either. You will admit your present circumstances would not justify that, won't you?"

"Certainly, sir," said the young man, looking a little puzzled.

"Fifteen dollars a week is not a large income. To tell you the truth—and I propose to speak candidly—I looked for a son-in-law in a far better financial condition."

"We are both willing to wait," said the young man.

"So you tell me," said Mackeldownie. "But what's the use of waiting?"

Her Papa Doesn't Like Delay

He smiled benevolently as he said it and the young man's mouth opened involuntarily in the excess of his astonishment. The old gentleman continued to smile as he resumed:

"I don't believe in waiting. Never did. If you and Evvy love each other to the extent you say you do, why not be united at the earliest possible moment—say a week from to-day?"

The dapper young man's sallow face became radiant with joy. "Are—are you willing that we should, sir?" he asked.

"Why not?" asked Mackeldownie, pleasantly. "Why wait? If you wait you may have a great deal more money, but money doesn't mean happiness, by any means.

"If you wait," went on Mackeldownie, "you may have a fine house and servants and automobiles and carriages and all the rest of those things, but I am afraid both you and Evvy would be getting along pretty well in life by that time. Lots of people have married on less than $15 a week. I suppose your father doesn't charge you anything for your board?"

"No," admitted Clarence. "I don't pay him anything just now. I could hardly afford it, of course."

"Of course not," agreed Mackeldownie. "As a single man you naturally have expenses that you wouldn't have if you were married. You dress quite expensively, for one thing, and I hear that you put a little money on the ponies once in a while and have other tastes that can't be indulged without loose change. Of course, if you marry Evvy you will have to cut all that out."

It Can Be Done on $15 a Week

"I assure you, sir——" began the young man.

"You don't need to," said the old gentleman. "It's a cinch. By the time you pay $15 a month for house rent, or flat rent, and pay the grocery bills and the instalments on the furniture and your carfare to the office, there won't be much left for that sort of luxury."

"Both you and Evvy have clothes enough to last you for quite a while. Perhaps by the time they're worn out you will get an increase of salary and make a dress appropriation in the domestic budget."

The young man's joyful expression left him. "Do you mean that we would have to keep house on my salary?" he asked.

"I don't see any other way except—do you?" said Mackeldownie. "I suppose you would want to take her to your father's house, and I'm sure he wouldn't care to have Evvy bring... I don't see any alternative myself... ence.

"Don't be discouraged, my boy," said Mackeldownie. "You can manage it, I know. Possibly you will be able to get night work of some sort—for small business men or ... will ... incl...

...you live economically you'll ... ed in New York with Mrs. ... d one small son for $10 a ...me, so I know. You won't ...many $2 seats at the the... ...ite likely that Evvy will ... family washing, as her mother did, but you are both young and strong and you will have each other.

Might Even Make a Man of Him

"It won't hurt you to carry a little cold lunch down to the office in a sandwich box and polish your own shoes. Nobody will think the less of you for that. Even if you have to wear shirts with detached cuffs you will find it won't lower you in people's estimation. I shouldn't be a bit surprised if the experience made a man of you."

The young man looked ugly for a moment at that. "I see what you're driving at, Mr. Mackeldownie," he said. "I knew it wasn't any good speaking to you. I told Evvy so. You mean to say that if we get married you won't give us a cent. That's what you mean to say."

"You've hit it exactly, my boy," said Mackeldownie genially. "That's precisely the impression I meant to convey."

"And you won't consent to our engagement?"

"That's where you're wrong, Clarence," said the old gentleman. "I consent freely. All I stipulate for is a short engagement. I think a week will be a great plenty to have you dangling around here and Evvy can get her clothes and things packed in that time. If she feels that she can't get along without you and you feel willing to undertake the duties and responsibilities of married life, I'll not stand in your way for a moment."

"You know it would be impossible for us to marry unless you helped us," said the young man. "I wouldn't want to do anything as foolish as that."

He Wouldn't Be Unfair to Evvy

"It might not be so foolish," said Mackeldownie, mildly. "Evvy might make a good poor man's wife. She has always thought so, and I have promised her that if she did marry a nice young fellow who happened to be poor I wouldn't spoil her romance by giving her any money. And I won't.

"Now, it's either a wedding in a week or not at all. If you want to go ahead I'll call Evvy down and give you my blessing; but that's the last thing I'll give you. Is it a go?"

"I'd like to do it," said the young man, sulkily, "but it wouldn't be fair to her."

"There's the chance that I'm bluffing, too," suggested the old man.

"I believe that it would tickle you to death to get me into that kind of a hole," said Clarence, after a look at the old man's face.

Mackeldownie sighed with relief when his visitor had gone, and turned with a smile to the girl, who had come from behind the screen.

"You're not sorry, are you, pet?" he asked.

"No, father," replied the girl. "You were right, and I'm glad, glad, glad!"

"Then what the devil are you crying about?" asked Mackeldownie.

The Girl with a Hundred Selves--By ? ? ? ?

"My Imaginative Self it is that makes real to me my pictures of the One Man"

"There! I am standing near him now, waiting—waiting till he shall feel that I am here"

Nell Brinkley's drawing, illustrating the writing of another girl, who has kept her identity secret

The Imaginative Self

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

SOMETIMES I think my Imaginative Self is the most wonderful of all my clamoring selves, for she it is that makes real to me my pictures of the One Man. She it is that sets my whole mind on fire with dreams that are vivid, actual substance, and she makes the days exquisite, the nights marvelous, with images far more real than the visions I see with my practical eyes of everyday.

For, oh, the eyes of the body are slow and stupid, many, many times; but the eyes of the mind are keen, keen; and they show me things that stun me with their beauty.

They show me the One Man—my Other Self—make him an actual, living being; create a picture of him so tangible that in thought I can go to him, lean upon his breast, press my cheek to his and feel the rushing rapture of his arms about me.

Never has the dream been so vivid as it is to-night. Never, never before has the spell wrapped me about with such beautiful enchantment. Hush! Listen softly, and I will tell you of the ecstasies that thrill and hold me.

A Dream of the Night of Nights

Such a night it is! The glamour of it is thick, like velvet; and shimmering as velvet, too. How can stupid people sleep on heavily in the midst of such magic? As for me, I have been awake for hours. Perhaps I shall stay awake until morning. I do not know. I do not care. I only want the dream to last forever.

It is late, very late, long after midnight. So hushed it is, I can almost hear the heart of the city beat. From my window I look down upon a sea of roofs, half hidden in caressing silver-dusk—a dusk starred with sleepy, flickering lights. There is a hint of moon itself. I only know that there is a moon and I feel its influence and am bewitched.

I am bewitched indeed this night of nights, and the soft darkness kindles with my dreams. Oh, how the pictures throng upon me, crowning, fluttering, beating against my brain like gauzy, winged things of light. Once I saw a garden all riotous golden bloom, and above it circled a swarm of snow-white butterflies. It is a picture I shall not forget.

My mind to-night is like that golden garden, swarming with brilliant winged things. But they are multi-colored, pansy-hued, gorgeous creatures, scarlet, gold, purple, rose, violet—oh, a myriad tints! Heart and brain are tropical with their flashing beauty; heart and brain alike beat time to the whir, whir of their silken wings.

Perhaps the "One Man" Is Near

I kneel by the window, with folded arms upon the sill, and gaze long, long upon the sea of roofs and the blurred violet line that marks the unknown spaces. And I say, with the glamour thick upon me,

"Perhaps—who knows?—the One Man lives not far away; maybe in this very city. Perhaps his home is down there among those glimmering roofs. Oh, somewhere, somewhere he does exist for me. I know it; I know it!"

And I whisper, breathlessly: "Perhaps he, too, is awake, even as I am, at this hour. Perhaps he, too, is dreaming of me—his unknown Other Self. Who knows? Who knows?"

Then the dream takes shape, slowly but with vivid sweetness. Roofs and sleepy lights and moon mist, all, all fade from my view. I see the figure of a man outlined. I see his face, strong, firm, masterful; his full throat, his fearless eyes, his brow that challenges admiration. I see his deep chest, his broad shoulders that can bear responsibilities, his muscular arms, his strong hands that can be tender as a woman's.

His pose is not the yielding pose of the man in love; it is rather that of a man who is stern, preoccupied, almost cold. He is not a man to yield to the coquetries of women.

Must Be Won by Love as in Battle

For long ago, in my first romantic visions of him, I created just this type. From the first I have had a crimson-mouthed contempt for the sort of men who dance to the tune of every pretty woman; men whose hearts are the playthings of coquettes.

As a girl I said: "My One Man shall be grim, hard, almost flint, where other women are concerned. Not a woman hater, for then he would be a monstrosity, but oh, a man so strong and fine, and with aims so big, that he would never condescend to play with love! Never, never could he be won by mere tricks of dress or manner. Never would he yield for mere beauty's sake."

Isn't it curious how we romantic women cling to that picture of our ideal mate? He must be invulnerable to all charmers, yet he must melt to us! Is it selfish? Is it unreasonable? Who shall say? I only know it is true. I only know the dream clings on—that it is woman's very creed in love's religion.

So to-night, with the picture of the One Man outlined before me, I, kneeling by my window, say again:

"He must be cold. He must be hard. His heart must be ice, and mine will be fire to kindle it. His brain must be filled with great ambitions that take no account of love. Indeed, love to him may seem almost an enemy that he must fight. So much the greater will love's victory be."

Vision That Grows in Reality

And the reality of the vision grows and grows, with the magic of my mood. Hush! Look! The picture changes; it is not mere outline any more. Not the man alone, but his surroundings, stand forth distinctly, softly clear. Where before was blank nothingness, I see walls, dim walls, closing round him. Somewhere there is a mellow, shaded light.

Now I can see him clearly. He is in a library, sitting alone with books piled up around him, lost to everything save the volume that enslaves him. A droplight hangs low over the table, leaving the rest of the apartment in gentle semi-darkness.

Hush! I am going to him; yes, going to him now. How sweet, how wonderful, is the quiet of that room! How sacred it is! I tremble and am breathless as I move across the threshold! Oh, I shall approach him softly, softly! My presence shall be quiet and caressing as mist.

There! I am standing near him now, just on the edge of the lamplight that encircles him. He does not see me yet, and I stand waiting—waiting till he shall feel that I am here.

Now he turns a page and his eyelids flutter. My heart is mad with beating. Soon, soon he must look up!

Oh, Dream Man; oh, Real Man—my Other Self, made for me before the foundation of the world!

The Manicure Lady

She Has Ideas on Politics and Advice for Presidents.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I S'POSE it's kind of grand and nice to be running for President," said the Manicure Lady, "but it ain't all honey and jam."

"Well spoken," said the Head Barber.

"No, sir, George, it ain't so velvety. I was reading in the paper this morning that poor, dear, fat old Mr. Taft has been beating it up the river, playing one night stands along the Hudson and talking from the back of automobiles, box cars, farmer wagons and other rigs that will hold his weight.

"The story I was reading said that he stopped at seventeen towns and made the same speech seventeen times. The weather was just awful, the paper said, but there on the different platforms stood Mister Taft, with earnestness in his eyes and nothing but rain water with which to gargle his throat with.

"And he never quit, but just kept right on talking about the grand old party and what he was going to do when he got his twin bed moved into the East room of the White House.

"I guess he's going to be there, all right. I certainly hope so, because I don't like Mister Bryan. The old man and Wilfred both voted for him eight years ago, and neither one of 'em has had a steady job since. Mother says she thinks it's Providence.

"I don't know much about politics, but I know Mister Bryan called all people which works for a living 'public beggars,' so I suppose us girls that goes after the hang nails is public beggaresses. I am earning an honest living, and I don't want nobody to slur me, not even one of them silver tongued orators that is always running for something they can't catch. I ain't no public beggaress, George, and never was.

That's No Fault of the Horse

"Yes, sir; I hope Taft gets in. He can do everything that Mister Roosevelt did, except jump a horse over a fence, and that ain't his fault; it's the fault of the horse. He can show his teeth, and go hunting, and sit on his private secretary, and meet Terry McGovern, and wrestle with one of them fat Jap wrestlers.

"I think he would be a better wrestler than Roosevelt, because he is there with the weight. I would like to see that Hitchyyama, or whatever was his name, trying to throw Big Bill.

"Of course, he ought not be so good at giving advice to mothers and girls as Teddy was, but that ain't statesmanship, is it, George? If I was a President I would keep all them sails trimmed on the ship of state and let Beatrice Fairfax give the advice to the mothers and girls.

"Another thing about Mister Taft, George. He wouldn't have such a mean disposition as Mister Roosevelt about calling folks nature fakers. If a nature writer said that a chamois was built like a mule, Mister Taft wouldn't contradict him, because he never climbed high enough up a mountain to see a chamois. If somebody should write that a muskrat was heard singing 'Oh, Promise Me,' Mister Taft would let it go that way, because he never knew anything about music and never claimed to."

"He wouldn't go shooting little bears in Louisiana, either," ventured the Head Barber.

"Of course he wouldn't," said the Manicure Lady. "He is a fat man, and you never seen a fat man yet that would shoot a defenceless critter, even if he could get near enough to one. All of them great hunters was slim and sinewy, like the Deerslayer, and the last of the Mohicans, and old Dan Boone, and Kid Crockett."

Who Mentioned Roosevelt?

"But Roosevelt ain't slim and sinewy," suggested the Head Barber.

"I said great hunters," replied the Manicure Lady. "No, George, Mister Taft would go hunting, but he wouldn't shoot. I think he has a awful tender heart, anyway. I'll bet you that when he is in the White House next Summer, and gets telegrams from Teddy telling about a lot of dead elephants and African buffaloes, he will cry for them poor wild beasts which was struck down in their prime by the cruel spear of a native guide or a deadly bullet from little Kermit's air rifle.

"He'll cry for them poor wild beasts."

"Wilfred wrote a poem last night about Mister Roosevelt and his son hunting in Africa. It was like this:

"'Oh, father, may I catch a bird?'
'Yes, my little Kerm;
Hang your clothes on a hickory tree
And make a noise like a worm.'"

"Well, after all," said the Head Barber, "I'll be kind of sorry to see Teddy go. And I ain't so sure Big Bill will be everything Teddy was. You said a minute ago that he could do everything that Teddy did. I'll bet you that he never charged up a hill at full speed."

"Probably he didn't," said the Manicure Lady. "But neither did Mister Roosevelt."

Little Notes of "Occasion"

Correct Forms for Use in Polite Correspondence

By MARY HUTTON PELL

[Member of the Four Hundred and an authority on all social matters]

EVERY once in a while there come to me requests as to how to answer invitations; how to write little notes of congratulation, or of condolence, as the case may be; how to acknowledge a gift; how to write a graceful little note to thank a hostess for the hospitality enjoyed; in short, how to meet correctly and gracefully the little requirements of good society where polite correspondence is concerned.

While considerable latitude is allowed for the expression of individuality, there is still a certain form that is more or less adhered to, according to the circumstances of the case.

We have already touched in this department upon the answering of invitations. It is really only for formal functions that such are sent out nowadays. The telephone is so ready at one's elbow that to call up your friends and invite them, by word of mouth (to use an old-time phrase), is considered correct for any of the informal and impromptu little affairs that society (with a great big S) leans mightly to nowadays.

When sending a gift to a bride-to-be, if she is one of your intimate friends, you should send a note with it. And if she resides at a distance, and your gift must go by express or by mail, then the note to accompany it is imperative. Where the note is sent, you need not enclose your card, as the stationery with your address on it, or your monogram, is sufficient.

The note may read somewhat as follows:

> Dear Alice:

Or, where the bride is not known to you, the groom being, perhaps, an old friend or even a relative, then the note is superfluous. You merely send your card with the gift.

In acknowledging wedding gifts, the bride holds more or less closely to the set form, such as:

> Dear Mrs. Oldham:
> Your charming gift came this morning, and both Robert and I appreciate it very much. It was very kind of you to remember us. I assure you that we shall have a great deal of pleasure in using the spoons in our new home; and they will always keep with us charming recollections of the giver. Sincerely yours, ——

When writing to acknowledge birthday, Christmas or other anniversary gifts, one usually says:

> Dear Mrs. Smith—It was so kind of you to remember my birthday and to send me that book. It is one that I have wanted to read, and the pleasure in doing so will be doubled by the remembrance of the giver.

Or,

> Dear Miss Jones—Your kindly remembrance of our wedding anniversary has pleased Mr. Smith and myself very much indeed. The book rack was just what we wanted, and we shall take a double pleasure in using it, remembering your cleverness in selecting a gift so suitable to our wooden wedding.

On returning from a visit you should always write your hostess to thank her for the hospitality you have enjoyed, and incidentally to let her know that you have arrived home safely. Of course, such a note is not necessary where you have made but a formal afternoon or evening visit, or been entertained at dinner. It is for the occasions where you have been a guest over the week end, or longer. In substance, it may read as follows:

> Dear Mrs. Owen—I arrived home last evening after an uneventful journey, and I want to thank you for the delightful time that I enjoyed with you. Every hour seemed to bring its own enjoyment, and I shall always have charming recollections of your home and your hospitality. Thanking you sincerely for such a pleasant visit. Cordially yours, ——

(Additional information as to correct forms for notes on various occasions will be given in Mrs. Pell's next article.)

Women Now Use Surgical Methods to Get the "Directoire Hand."

"HANDS made over while you wait" is the latest offer of New York's beauty culturists. For, be it known, gowns of the latest fashion, with their long, close sleeves of graceful lines, require that the wearers have, also, to match them, the "Directoire hand."

Fortunately, the method by which the "Directoire hand" is acquired does not involve as much of either time or torture as Chinese women endure in acquiring their fashionably crippled feet, and just now smart girls are all spending their spare time in the process of getting the "Directoire hand"—that is, all but the girls favored by nature with hands of that type.

The reason for this is apparent when one thinks of a girl in long, close-fitting sleeves, from which protrude hands that are pudgy, or that have crooked or short and stubby fingers—the graceful, slim lines of the sleeve accentuating the defects of the hands and making them look positively unsightly.

First of all, then, the hands are soaked, as usual, in a big bowl of warm, sudsy water for fully seven minutes. One hand is then withdrawn, and, while the other is being treated, there is clasped upon the fingers the very newest device from Paris, just brought over by the specialist—finger clamps.

Binding on the wooden finger with gauze.

Adjusting one of the new Parisian finger clamps.

In all there are five of them, one for every finger of the disengaged hand. On the tips of each pink finger the five little metal bonnets—looking for all the world like thimbles with butterfly handles—are placed.

Each of these novel bonnets or clips exert a pressure sufficient to mould the nail and finger tips to the desired shape once the nail has been softened by the preliminary soaking. During the hand shaping process the fingers of the other hand are treated.

In addition to wearing the clips at this time, they should be worn for at least twenty minutes each night before retiring.

It is amazing to see how soon the fingers will begin to take on the fashionable look and become tapering and pointed, for in addition to the finger clips the nails must be cut pointed also.

To cut the nails the shape of the finger tip was the mode formerly in vogue. Now the nails must perforce taper, too, like the fingers, only, instead of the hideous sharp points like bird's claws which some women affect, the very ends must be filed slightly round. Seemingly an anomalous proposition, they must be pointed, yet round. This is the Directoire nail.

A splint bandage, precisely the same kind you would use if your arm was broken, and set by a surgeon, only on a smaller scale, is the treatment prescribed for this difficulty. Fortunately, however, there is nothing painful about this operation. The obstreperous finger is first thoroughly massaged. It is then rubbed with the penetrating oil from Arabia; next the splint is applied.

A small bit of pine wood is admirable for the purpose. Strips of narrow gauze bind it in place, and it is then allowed to remain on over night. Frequently, though, the application is made by the specialist only.

It is an interesting sight to see, sitting around in easy chairs, anywhere from a dozen to twenty women, all with their hands bandaged, fingers in splints, or wearing the new finger clasps. The room resembles more the waiting room of the surgical department of a hospital than a beauty parlor.

The hand, in its entirety, is also given surgical treatment to make it slim, and even the wrist. In the magazine section of to-morrow's Boston Sunday American full details are given of the methods by which smart women who lack them are acquiring the "Directoire hands" that fashion makes it imperative to possess.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

RETURN THEM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A girl kept company with a gentleman over fifteen years older than herself for several years. They were not definitely engaged, but expected to marry some time when the man could support her, since he was burdened with others for a while. The young lady wearied of his attentions and met another she preferred. She dismissed the gentleman, there apparently being no feeling of malice on either side. He sought her company on the street several times, and upon her refusal to continue as friends, packed up every trifle she had given him in the past four years, down to a necktie, which he had worn, and returned them to her, much to her surprise. She wrote him stating his conduct was too contemptible to follow, whereupon he saw her again in the street and tried to make her see she should return said gifts, several of which she has used and worn. Not one of said gifts has any intrinsic value. The man still expects her to return said gifts. Should they be returned according to polite usages? M. M.

THE man showed a small spirit in returning gifts that had been worn, but he was jealous and angry, and did not realize how small his conduct appeared. At the same time, as he has asked the girl to return his gifts, she cannot very well refuse, if she has a spark of pride. The only thing to do is send them all to him at once.

MORSE BALKS PROSECUTOR FROM STAND

Defies District Attorney Stimson—Excused from Answering Questions.

WINS IMPORTANT POINT

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Charles W. Morse, on trial in the United States Court charged with violating the national bank laws, apparently achieved a signal victory to-day at the opening of the day's hearing when Assistant District Attorney Stimson announced that he had no further questions to ask the former "ice king."

At the close of yesterday's session Morse refused to answer certain questions propounded by the district attorney, and in effect defied the authorities of the United States Government in doing so. When court was adjourned it was believed that the federal attorney would insist that his questions be answered, but Morse remained staunch in maintaining that the questions were not proper.

He assumed a dictatorial tone on the stand and argued that under the law he was not compelled to respond.

That he was correct in his assumption was apparently the case. His friends and his wife smiled broadly when the district attorney said to-day that he had no further questions to ask. Mr. Morse had won a point.

"BLOOMERS NEXT," SAYS MME. EAMES

Prima Donna Back from Europe in Pill Box Hat and with New Fashion Ideas.

HAS HER OWN STYLES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Predicting that women will soon wear bloomers, Emma Eames, the Metropolitan Opera star, gave out an interesting interview on fashion upon her arrival here to-day on the French liner La Lorraine.

The famous singer wore for a hat a fantastic creation which she described as a "toque tricorne," or a hunting hat. It was made of squirrel fur and was trimmed with two bright green wings with a yellow centre and two high-standing green plumes. It resembled the little "pill box" hats which threatened for a time to be popular this season.

Considerate for Man.

"I never wear big hats," Mme. Eames said in reply to a question. "My consideration for the male sex would not permit me to do so. Neither do I wear the foolish puffs which are now so much in vogue. I am not a devotee of fashion to that extent. I like to have my own style headwear and dress.

"Dressmakers make women conform to outlandish fashions. It is to their interest to do so, and to change fashions often. It is my opinion that dressmakers will shortly drive women to bloomers."

Asked about the cabled report that her former husband, Julian Story, had been chasing her over the continent seeking a reconciliation, the prima donna declared that the story was ridiculous. From the way she spoke it appeared she is very bitter against him.

Her "Mind" Unchangeable.

"Do I look like a woman," she asked, "who after chasing all over the country for ten years seeking to get a divorce from a man—and hating the word divorce—do I look like a woman who would change her mind?

"It appears to me as though Mr. Story would be a woman's last resort. His actions on the other side and at Maxim's, where I have heard he danced until 2 and 3 in the morning, gave me no indication that he is looking for a reconciliation."

Anty Drudge Explains Why the Waist Went into Holes.

Mrs. Don'tno—"I must have been cheated in that woolen waist. It pulled right into holes in the washtub."

Anty Drudge—"You wouldn't think you were cheated if you got a leg of mutton which boiled that tender. It was the boiling that weakened your waist just as it makes meat or vegetables tender. Stop boiling your clothes. Wash them with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, and they'll wear twice as long."

What are clothes made of?

Wool, cotton or linen, animal or vegetable fibre.

What does boiling or scalding do to them?

Makes them tender just as it does meat or vegetables.

What does hard rubbing on a washboard do to them?

Wears them into holes before their time.

Are you abusing your clothes like that in the weekly wash?

Burning up fuel and working like a slave to do it?

There's a far better way to get clean clothes.

Let Fels-Naptha soap take the dirt out of them in cool or lukewarm water without boiling, without hard rubbing.

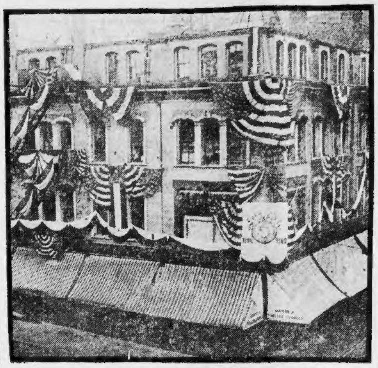

It saves the clothes—makes them last twice as long.

In summer or winter, it saves fuel, time, hard work, bother and discomfort.

Directions for the Fels-Naptha way of washing are printed on the back of the red and green wrapper.

Follow them carefully.

Houston Display in Honor Of the Catholic Centenary

Much favorable comment is being made by the Catholic clergy on the artistic decorations of the James A. Houston Company's store, Washington street and Temple place, in honor of the Catholic centenary of the founding of the diocese of Boston.

The large department store has been transformed into a galaxy of red, white and blue bunting, so tastily draped that every inch of the exterior of the building is covered.

In the large corner show window is exhibited a large, beautifully hand-colored portrait of Archbishop William H. O'Connell, which is to be shown by the Gray Nuns at the Catholic Charity Bazaar in Mechanics Building next month.

Surmounting the large corner entrance is a mammoth reproduction of the centenary medal, done in black and white. Altogether the color scheme is well executed and is attracting much attention among the shoppers of Greater Boston.

SHOE STANDS TEST OF YEARS

The Traveler Shoe is one of the most popular and best selling articles of footwear on the market and has stood the tests of twelve years' wear in a way that has firmly established it in public favor. It is a good deal of a local institution now. It was first put on the market twelve years ago by Mr. I. Wit, who christened and introduced the shoe and had such confidence in its merits that he was not afraid to stand back of every endorsement. The shoe was first sold in a small store directly opposite the Old South Church, and the price was set at $2.50. It was a success with the public from the start for two reasons, being a first-class shoe for $2.50, it was a novelty; it also had style and quality.

Mr. Wit is now operating stores selling it in all the principal cities in this country. There are one million men and women in the United States now wearing this shoe, Mr. Wit says. Two large factories which make this shoe only are kept busy throughout the year. The employes of these factories are union workers.

CLOSE FOOD FAIR TO-NIGHT

The great annual New England Food Fair and House Furnishing Exposition, which has been held in the Mechanics building the past four weeks, closes tonight at 10 o'clock. Last year's record of 637,877 visitors will be far eclipsed.

Already preparations are under way for another annual food fair and exposition to be held under the same management of Messrs. Green and Rowe and in the same place, Mechanics building, which long ago was secured for this purpose. A large percentage of this year's exhibitors have applied for space and been given the locations they now occupy.

BERT HAVERLY DIES SUDDENLY

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—While his companions still laughed at one of his pleasantries, Bert Haverly, once known all over the country as a minstrel and comedian, and a brother of Colonel Jack Haverly, turned to leave a cafe and dropped dead. The funeral will be held under the direction of theatrical men of this city. Haverly came into prominence a quarter of a century ago. He was associated with Reed and Emerson, and later appeared in Hoyt's comedies.

SOUVENIR DAY CLOSES FAIR

To-day is the last of the big Boston Food Fair in the Park Square Coliseum, and at 10 o'clock to-night the Boston Retail Grocers' Association will close five weeks of what has been the greatest success of all the seven food fairs they have given. The daily attendance has averaged 25,000 visitors, aggregating about three-quarters of a million.

As a special observance of this last day, the first 500 ladies who bought tickets this morning received a can of stove polish, and also a copy of "The Fairest of the Fair," that popular march by Sousa. Every visitor to the fair to-day, morning, afternoon or evening, becomes the fortunate possessor of a package of gelatine large enough to make a pint of jelly, and an additional souvenir of a cake of soap. The first 500 buying tickets after 7 p. m. will take away with them a full-size package of gelatine. Special programmes have been laid out by Conductor Mollenhauer, who will lead Stewart's Boston Band of seventy pieces in his last concerts from 3 to 5 and 8 to 10 p. m.

HAINS ATTORNEY ROBBED OF $2,000

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Two masked burglars broke into the country residence of Joseph A. Shay, associate counsel with John F. McIntyre in the Hains case, at Cedarhurst, L. I., last night, held up the lawyer and his wife and mother-in-law at the point of revolvers and robbed them of about $2,000 in cash, diamonds and other valuables.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR COUGH.

Mix a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure with two ounces of Glycerine and a half-pint of good Whisky; shake well, and take a teaspoonful every four hours.

It is claimed this mixture will break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable. Being free from opiates and drugs, it is far preferable to the ordinary cough remedies, and, as it provides a quantity sufficient to last the average family an entire year, is as inexpensive as it is effective.

The necessary ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist, and the mixture easily prepared. It is well to remember, when having this formula put up, that the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure is never sold in bulk, but is put for dispensing only in half-ounce vials, each vial securely sealed in a round wooden case. Rank imitations, resembling the genuine only in name and style of package, are sometimes offered, but these are essentially ineffective, and often cause nausea. It is better to purchase the ingredients separately and prepare the mixture at home. Be sure to get the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure, guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, Serial No. 451, prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, O.

Double Legal Stamps will be given with every purchase mornings until 12 o'clock noon at Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner Hanover and Portland streets. Single stamps thereafter.

COLE TRICKERY BARED TONIGHT AT LAWRENCE

Independence Party Orators Will Tell Story of His Fall at Stirring Rally.

CANDIDATES WILL SPEAK

LAWRENCE, Oct. 31.—William N. Osgood, Independence League nominee for Governor; Robert J. McCartney, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; Michael C. O'Neill of Boston, Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Haverhill and other new party speakers will speak to-night at an Independence rally in City Hall here.

"John N. Cole and his affiliations with the Republican State machine" will be the subject of disclosures by Rev. Mr. Sawyer, which will be of special interest to residents of this city. Lawrence voters have been puzzled as to the real reason for the turning down of Cole by the State machine in his campaign for the Lieutenant-Governor nomination. Mr. Sawyer will tell the story to-night.

Mr. Osgood will present new arguments, showing why the Independence League is the party whose platform appeals most strongly to the conscientious voter.

Mr. McCartney, the nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, who for eight years was head of the New England Conference of Iron Molders, will deal particularly with those planks in the Independence party's platform which treat of workingmen's issues. He will explain why the new party platform planks are the only ones which meet the demands of organized labor. He will tell also of Lieutenant-Governor Draper's trickery in his dealings with organized labor and his long-standing hostility to labor's interests.

Mr. O'Neill will discuss the corruption which exists in the two old parties and point out the remedy, which lies only in the support of the Independence League nominees by those voters who have the interests of the country in mind.

BAT NELSON WILL MEET PACKY NEW YEARS DAY

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Battling Nelson and Packy McFarland will meet in a forty-five round battle before Jimmy Coffroth's Mission street arena at Colma, Cal., on New Year's afternoon. This information was given out by Willus Britt, manager for Nelson, before he started West last night. Britt has just returned from Boston, where Nelson has a week's theatrical engagement. Just what arrangements Britt made with Harry Gilmore, McFarland's manager, who is in New York, could not be learned, but Willus emphatically declares the match will go through unless the little Irishman decides to side-step the Dane.

"I am the manager of Battling Nelson and all stories to the contrary are false," said Britt, and he drew from his pocket a contract, which binds Bat to him, "and as his manager he will do what I saw and not what he is told to do by others. From the day I took hold of Nelson I aided him, and I am frank to admit that it was my teaching, as much as his fighting, that wrested the title from Gans. Bat knows that and has voluntarily declared himself so.

Dixon Only a Friend.

"There is a Mr. Dixon traveling with Nelson and because of their close connections the public at large take him to be the Dane's manager. Dixon is a man of much means and would not care to manage a fighter, but while with Nelson is giving him whatever advice the Hegewisch lad needs. Dixon, however, does not butt into the managerial end of Nelson's affairs."

When asked regarding Nelson's injured hand and his attempt to delay ring matters until he has completed his book Britt said:

"That Nelson hurt his hand in his fight with Gans is true, but it is not in such condition that he cannot step into the ring on January 1. Regarding his layoff to complete his book, that is all idle gossip. The book needs another chapter, the concluding one, which will tell 'How I Beat Packey McFarland,' and until he trims the Chicago lad the book will not go to press.

"Do you get me clearly? I am Nelson's manager and no fighter is going to tell me my business. I have managed knights of the roped arena before and with success, and I am not going to fail here. I can get Bat more money than any other living man and he knows it."

Dane Talks Too Freely.

"Nelson likes to talk. Not because he wants something to say, but to oblige his newspaper friends, who are continually after him for news. It is when pursued by these scribes that he makes those ewild statements about not fighting and this and that. Nelson is a born fighter, as the world knows, and anybody who has followed his climb knows that he would rather fight than eat. He never dodged a battle in his life, and he certainly won't begin now.

"Packey is a good fighter, and in a battle of under fifteen rounds would give Nelson a fierce contest and would likely outpoint him, but in a forty-five-round affair it's another knockout to Nelson's list. McFarland is about as fast a little fellow as the lightweight class has had, but he lacks the punch. Gans, a master at the game, could not drop the Dane, and he had a wicked kick. How can Packey hope to stop my boy?

"When the two clash you can bet every dollar that there will be a fight, one far different than ring followers have seen in years. And let me tell you right here, Packey won't go out in ten or fifteen rounds either. He will make Nelson step some and fight desperately, but he will eventually go down a beaten but not disgraced fighter. As soon as I land in Frisco I will get Coffroth to working to close the deal."

Packy Eastern Star.

Britt says McFarland is surely the only star that twinkles on Broadway. He says the little Irishman trimmed Cross in great fashion, and that he will do the same to Murphy or any other fighter the East can bring forth. It is Packy's speed that staggers all of the Eastern lads.

Britt, who is about as sorewd a manager as the ring has, spoke freely of the stories sent out about Nelson being afraid of McFarland. He said he did not offer any answer to those yarns simply to create greater interest in the fight. Britt realizes that McFarland has fought himself to the front until Nelson is the only man that stands between him and the title, and that a match between the two would necessarily come.

He looks for the biggest house that ever witnessed a fight and says Packy and Nelson will draw over $50,000. The Western fans are anxious to see these two scrappers in the ring, and they will come from all sides to witness the great championship fight.

COFFROTH SAYS FIGHT WILL BE CENTURY'S BEST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 31.—"Received wire from Britt, who is in Chicago, saying he has accepted McFarland's offer to fight Nelson and that he wants me to handle the fight. This will be the pugilistic encounter of the century, and I will lose no time bringing the two together. As soon as Britt arrives I will present a set of articles to him to be signed. I have mailed a similar set to Gilmore at New York and hope he will sign them. Just what I am offering for the fight I do not care to say at this time, but I know it will be accepted by both sides. If the bout takes place I look for a $50,000 house."—JAMES W. COFFROTH.

PACKY WILLING TO WAIT FOR THE BATTLER

BY TAD.

Packy McFarland is tickled to death over the prospect of meeting Battling Nelson in Frisco on New Year's Day. Willus Britt started the story going in Chicago. It may be a pipe dream and it may not, but Packey believes it and says if it comes true he'll be satisfied with life.

"I'm waiting for the time," says the Chicago kid, "and when it comes I'll be ripe. You know the reason I cut my hair all off, don't you? Well, just to keep me in the house. I knew that if my head was shaved that I'd be ashamed to go around to the cafes and shows, and that I'd stay up in my room.

"Well, that's me. I'm reading the history of Ireland now every night and then I switch over to my set of Dickens. He was a great writer, wasn't he? That 'David Copperfield,' 'Dombey and Son,' 'Oliver Twist' and 'Barnaby Rudge' are hard to beat. I never laughed so much in my life as I did over 'David Copperfield.' That old fellow, Micawber, was sure some kidder, wasn't he?

"That's it—the simple life. I'm only twenty on next Sunday, so you see that I have lots of time.

* * *

Mr. L. Cross, the solstonger kid, is taking the rest cure now up at Pawling, N. Y., and dreaming of the trimming he was handed by a certain gentleman from Chicago. Leach is as confident as he ever was and feels certain that when he meets Packy again that the battle will end with a different winner.

His letter follows:

Pawling, N. Y., Oct. 29, '08.

Dear Tad:

Here goes a loser's spiel. I hope you'll not pan it too much. You know a fellow can't win all of the time, and if I lose once every ten months until I croak I'll be satisfied. This was the first time I lost since Jack Goodman gave me my introductory lacing ten months ago. I want to get both Goodman and McFarland again, and after a month's rest I'm coming back to start again.

I hope Murphy picks up enough courage to fight me again, and I'll sign up with him whether he wins or loses with McFarland.

I think that in a ten-round go that I'd beat Packy, and I'll sign for the go at less money than I received for the six-round go. I was better in the latter part of the six-round go and was just getting on to his attack.

Give me a chance, that's all. After my month's up here I'll be down again winning my way back into public favor.

Yours as ever, LEACH CROSS.

JAKE STAHL TO BE OFFICIAL

Jake Stahl is not only a good first baseman, but also something of a football official. Jake was a star player at Illinois University, and his services as a football arbitrator are much in demand. A special from Ann Arbor says:

After much wrangling the officials for the Michigan-Penn game have finally been decided upon. There has been continuous disagreement between the two colleges as to the officials, as it is declared it was the inability of one of the officials that lost Michigan the game last year. The officials selected are: Langford, of Trinity, referee; McCarthy, of Brown, umpire; Edwards, of Princeton, field judge; "Jake" Stahl, of Illinois, head linesman.

FORTUNE LOST ON "OLD EPH"

Those who backed old Eph Cinders, 2:05¾, to win the free-for-all pace at Baltimore were taken into camp almost as badly as were those who played against the old warrior when he beat Jerry B., 2:04¾, at Columbus.

A lot of money was bet on the Baltimore race at $625 against $600 before the start, and even after Eph had finished seventh in the opening heat, won by Baron Whips, he still brought $100 to $100 over the field, including such horses as Gallagher, 2:03½, Jennie W., 2:04½, Major Mallow, 2:05¼, and Ethan Roberts, 2:04¼.

Eph finished 4-4 the next two heats, which went to Whips, and those from Boston who saw the race say it was all bucking to defeat Eph Cinders at any cost, he having the "overland" route to travel every inch of the way.

FUTURITIES ARE BACKBONE OF THE TURF

It must be apparent to an observer of events in the racing world that futurities have come to be the real thing, that they afford an opportunity to win more money and glory than can be won in any other way.

There are now a number of futurities in the field, and it is possible for a colt to win a small fortune for a comparatively little outlay in entrance money, and without his being subjected to a long and grueling campaign.

There are also enough futurities in the field to afford the colt of average ability a chance to pick off an occasional plum, while the superior colt is resting in the barn, or, maybe, is slightly off form.

If there had been but one futurity this year The Harvester would have been the only three-year-old colt to command attention, but as it is, other winners, such as The Leading Lady, Bravolo, Justo and others, have made us sit up and take notice.

Owners of racing stables, men who have never before raced colts, are now eagerly seeking for promising and well-staked colts. This was the main object of buyers at the late Lexington meeting, and, of course, the breeder is bound to reap the benefit of this new impetus.

The man with a likely colt, well engaged in futurities—and that's the only kind that's wanted—will not have to look long for a market, and if his colt is of exceptional promise he can practically name his own price.

MILWAUKEE FIGHT LID IS LIFTED

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 31.—It was a case of too much publicity with the boxing game in Milwaukee just as it was publicity that killed pugilism in New York. When boxing is resumed in Milwaukee the bouts must be unimportant, and no more championship contests can be billed. That, in substance, is the statement made to Milwaukee boxing promoters when they asked if there was to be a resumption of boxing allowed later in the Winter.

Although all the promoters refused to talk on the question, they intimated that they had an understanding with the sheriff. Their understanding is that the Governor does not care to interfere, and will only step in to stop fights if they are too widely advertised.

Sheriff Knell, who acted for the Governor in forbidding the Kelly-Papke fight, has, it is said, informed the promoters that if his deputy, Kissinger, now a candidate for election, is elected, boxing will be permitted after election.

The trouble, according to Sheriff Knell, was that the big fights that were pulled off were too well advertised, and this advertising called down the wrath of the preachers and the Governor was forced to interfere, even though it was against his wish.

Sheriff Knell told the newspapers that boxing matches were permanently stopped. The sporting men, however, understand the situation is not so serious as that.

BIG FOREIGN DRIVERS HERE FOR GREAT RACE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Felice Nazzaro and Louis Wagner, the renowned European auto drivers who are to handle Fiat cars in the Grand Prize race of the Automobile Club of America at Savannah, Ga., on Thanksgiving Day, arrived in New York on the French liner La Lorraine this morning. They will remain in the metropolis until Tuesday morning when the steamship for Savannah will be taken. From New York Nazzaro and Wagner will be accompanied by Ralph De Palma, the American boy, who will drive the third Fiat, and by twelve mechanics from the Fiat factory at Turin, Italy.

The three racing cars and a practice machine, with twenty-one cases of racing supplies, reached this country Wednesday on the steamship Koenigen Luise and will be put on board the same steamer which takes the drivers south. These cars are all of Grand Prix type, included in the number being the one with which Nazzaro won the Florio Cup race in September last at the world's record average speed of 74½ miles an hour.

At Savannah the Fiat quarters will be located at Kidwell's motor boat factory, Thunderbolt, directly off the course and at the head of a splendid three-mile stretch approaching the grandstand. On this property a new garage, with every facility from the standpoint of power, light and machinery, has been erected expressly for the Fiat Company.

On Monday evening next the Fiat Automobile Company will tender a dinner to Nazzaro, Wagner and De Palma, to which many notables have been invited.

Perhaps one of the best appearing of the medium priced cars that has yet been seen in this city is the Oldsmobile Model D, which was yesterday received by the Algonquin Motor Car Company. In general appearance it has the earmarks of the higher priced motor vehicle, being particularly natty in construction and finish, every attention having been paid to the matter of detail and equipment. While the exterior, with its Mercedes like radiator, is most attractive and up to date, there is to be found under the hood one of the best constructed and finished motors of 40 horsepower that one can desire. All through this new car from stem to stern, from ground to top, there is every evidence of refinement, of a desire to produce the best that is possible, and the wonder of it all is that the car can be built and placed on the market at the price asked. In motor construction there is to be found the best and most up-to-date ideas—ideas that have by years of experimenting and actual work proven to be the most acceptable and lasting in a motor vehicle. Not a single thing on the car but what has been adapted after actual demonstrations of its fitness, and in this car the Oldsmobile Company has every reason to feel that it has produced a winner, a fitting successor to the fine line of cars that have gone before. Naturally Manager A. E. Adams is well pleased with this, his latest pet.

PIANOS AND ORGANS. | PIANOS AND ORGANS.

WOMEN ARE THE SHREWDEST PIANO BUYERS

We find that women do the most investigating, the most looking around. They are better bargain hunters than men, and in most cases are better judges of bargain values—But when they get up here and see the piano bargains on our sacrifice floor they have sense enough to go no further—They have never in all their lives seen such reckless cutting of prices as they see in our fight with the Piano Trust—It's seldom that you can't save from $100 to $150 on any of the standard makes up here, and women who call know it—because they have looked around and they know.

WE WILL PAY SPOT CASH FOR PIANOS ANYWHERE TRUST PIANOS PREFERRED

$5 Down—$1 a Week The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

"Stand by Your Friends; Defeat Your Enemies"

How Workingmen Can Carry Out the Instructions of the State Federation

Organized labor's official stamp of condemnation has been placed upon Eben S. Draper, Republican candidate for Governor; Louis A. Frothingham, Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; Senator Charles D. B. Fiske of Boston, of the Fifth Suffolk District; Senator Elmer C. Potter, of the First Worcester District, and Senator William O. Faxon, of the Second Norfolk District. Faxon is not a candidate for public office at this election.

The concluding line of the official circular that has been sent out by the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor condemning these men says:

"STAND BY YOUR FRIENDS AND DEFEAT YOUR ENEMIES."

Draper and Frothingham are condemned because they have been opposed to organized labor. Draper does not hire union laborers. He does not favor the eight-hour day, for if he did he would give his help at Hopedale an eight-hour day.

Frothingham has a bad record in the Legislature against labor measures. Senators Fiske, Faxon and Potter, as members of a recess committee, pretended to favor a peaceful picketing bill, but when it came before the Senate they voted against it.

Surely these men are enemies of labor. Now let us see who are the friends of labor and who the organized workingmen should vote for.

For twenty years William N. Osgood, Independence League candidate for Governor, has been fighting for direct legislation. Organized labor has been demanding direct legislation for a long time.

For more than a dozen years Mr. Osgood has written and spoken brilliantly and forcefully for the public ownership of those public utilities that in their very nature are monopolies. That has been the stand of organized labor.

The initiative and the referendum and the recall have been advocated by William N. Osgood year after year. Organized labor has repeatedly gone on record in favor of these things.

Mr. Osgood, as a member of the 1904 State Commission on the relations between employer and employe, advocated a peaceful picketing bill. Organized labor demands such a bill.

As a member of this same commission Mr. Osgood, dissenting from the majority members, wrote into the report an anti-injunction bill, and to-day we find organized labor insisting that this is their most important and most imperative need; a change in the laws that will not make them the helpless victims of injunctions; that will give them a right to appeal in cases of contempt and have trials by jury. Mr. Osgood is officially on record, in the reports at the State House, in favor of such legislation.

Time and time again Mr. Osgood has spoken before committees of the Legislature in favor of the eight-hour day and in favor of a workman's compensation act that would be broader in its scope than any employers' liability bill, and he has fought for a bill that would restrain the money lender from bleeding unfortunate people to death.

"Stand by your friends and defeat your enemies" is the order issued by the officials of organized labor's State branch. In all fairness, has not William N. Osgood, for many years, in season and out of season, not as a candidate for public office, not as a seeker for votes, but as a plain citizen, been a consistent friend and advocate of labor's causes?

Well might this concluding sentence of organized labor be paraphrased to read:

"Stand by your friend, William N. Osgood, for Governor, and defeat your enemy, Eben S. Draper."

Of all the candidates nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, to which one should organized workers naturally turn? Frothingham is officially condemned. Barton, the Democratic candidate, has never been recognized as a friend of organized labor.

Robert J. McCartney of Kingston, Independence League candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, has been for fifteen years a member in good standing of the molders' union and for ten years one of the leading champions of unionism in New England. For eight years, as the official head of the molders of New England, he did more to better the conditions of the men of his craft than any other single man connected with it. One of his monuments is the Foundry Sanitation bill, which compels proprietors of foundries to provide decent working places for their help.

Again paraphrase the edict of organized labor; it might well read:

"Stand by your friend for Lieutenant-Governor, Robert J. McCartney, and defeat Louis A. Frothingham."

Coming down to the condemned Senators, a splendid illustration is afforded of the lack of interest that the Democratic party bosses have in the Democratic party and the contempt they have for organized labor's wishes.

The Republicans comprising the Fifth Suffolk District, Wards 10, 11 and 25 of Boston, renominated Fiske for Senator. The Republicans of that district do not pretend to be the friends of the laboring man. That is why, in defiance of the request of organized labor, they have again nominated Senator Fiske.

The Democrats, instead of opposing Fiske, instead of fighting him, instead of attempting to do anything to defeat him, MADE NO NOMINATION AT ALL IN THE FIFTH DISTRICT. Absolutely heedless of the prayer of organized labor that Fiske be defeated, the Democratic bosses of the district, obeying the demands of the public service corporations, which Fiske serves, and which they serve, allowed the Democratic nomination to go by default so that Fiske's return to the Senate might not be impeded.

This is another case of Democratic politicians betraying party and people. This is simply another instance of the bunco game the Democratic party has been playing upon organized labor.

Democratic leaders of that district know full well that organized labor had declared that Fiske was its enemy and should be marked for defeat by labor's friends.

The Independence League has nominated a clean-cut, honest, able candidate against Fiske. His name is William C. Johnson. He is a resident of Ward 10 and employed as a prescription clerk in the City Hall Drug Store, on School street. He stands for all the things that Fiske has opposed. He is pledged to be the friend of the workingman and to safeguard the interests of the people, if elected.

Has the Democratic party shown any friendship to organized labor by its action in the Fifth Suffolk Senatorial District? How can organized labor consistently stand by the Democratic party after such an exhibition of contempt for its wishes on the part of the bosses of that party? No more flagrant and no more vicious disregard for the rights of the workingman can be found than this servile obedience by the Fifth District Democratic bosses of the mandate of the corporations, which ordered them to remove all possible opposition to Senator Fiske.

Again the words of organized labor's official circular might be paraphrased to read:

"Stand by your friend in the Fifth Suffolk Senatorial District, William C. Johnson, candidate for Senator, and defeat your enemy, Senator Charles D. B. Fiske, the favored one of the Republican party and the corporation-owned bosses of the Democratic party."

An Appeal to Progressive and Independent Voters

By Rev. Roland D. Sawyer

There are thousands of independent, progressive and reform voters to be found in the old parties in this State, who will this year either refrain from voting at all, or who will vote their party tickets under protest and with great misgivings at heart. Draper and Frothingham both so clearly represent the reactionary element, and Vahey and Barton really represent no principle at all, seeking merely to secure political party supremacy, that the really thoughtful, progressive voter cannot vote either ticket with any enthusiasm, if he votes it at all. And so I do here appeal to all such men to vote, as I shall, for Osgood and McCartney.

William N. Osgood is an able and sincere man, who has for years in a quiet, earnest way been doing much for the causes of genuine reform. The Boston Journal of October 27 said editorially: "William N. Osgood is an intelligent, respected citizen of Lowell and a man who is neither violent nor incoherent in his political methods. He is an eminently sane and respectable candidate who has subscribed to the doctrines of the Independence League." We could ask no better evidence as to the character of Mr. Osgood than this gracious tribute paid by the organ of an opposition political party in the midst of a heated political campaign. Years ago Mr. Osgood was the member of a mid-session legislative committee on relations between employer and employe, and he submitted a minority report for that committee that to-day reads almost like a prophecy, so clearly did he then see the trend of conditions and so clearly point to remedial legislation.

The most conservative men in these days are contending for the need of some sort of employer's liability act to safeguard employes in injury. In 1903 Mr. Osgood submitted a bill on this very matter, demanding that injuries to workmen be classified and certain damages be paid without regard to the troublesome questions of negligence, defective machinery, etc.

No man knows better than does the average clergyman how humane and merciful an act this would be. We who are called into the homes in the times of accident and death, and see the real inside of sorrow and trouble, we know what a blessed thing such legislation would be.

There is no political reform more far-reaching in its effects than direct legislation, the restoration of the government to the people. By use of this little Switzerland is working out satisfactorily the problems that stagger us.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Osgood was associated with such men as the late George E. McNeill, Professor Frank Parsons and Frank K. Foster in the establishing in this State a league to further this very reform.

I shall vote for Mr. Osgood with alacrity, regarding it as an opportunity to pay a tardy indorsement to a man who has long and faithfully advocated consistent reform measures. And I shall just as cheerfully vote for Mr. McCartney, because when we have come to the pass that in the ruling party in this State no man can be a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor unless he can put $30,000 into his campaign, and can show that he lives and moves in aristocratic circles, I believe the very fact of an honest, intelligent workingman being on the ticket at all makes him sufficiently an issue in himself that we should rally to him.

And I am here making this final appeal to the voters in this State who think and feel about as I do on these questions, not to cast a blank ballot, or throw it away, but to put it in the ballot box for OSGOOD and M'CARTNEY.

Rockefeller's Futile Attempt to Help Bryan

The derision with which Mr. Rockefeller's proclamation that he is for Taft is received at the White House will be echoed throughout the country. As the AMERICAN pointed out yesterday, the Rockefeller statement was a craftily devised Bryan campaign document, but so transparent as to defeat its own purposes.

Chairman Mack's celerity in seizing on Mr. Rockefeller's declaration proved all that this newspaper said of it. But Mr. Mack's words, caroming from a sounding board formed by the safe where lately reposed the $300,000 Haskell-got gift of the Standard Oil Company, rang as hollow as did the utterance of Mr. Rockefeller.

The latter, in his "Random Reminiscences," confesses to the knowledge of a wide public prejudice against him and all of his works. His attempt to use that prejudice as a club to drive voters into the Bryan corral is interesting as an admission of his shamelessness, but it will not prove effective.

It is, of course, important to know who Mr. Rockefeller is, for in order that the citizen's vote may be cast against him and Archbold and bribery and corruption. The safest guide in this matter is to vote for Mr. Hisgen, who has spent his life fighting against Standard Oil, and whose attitude toward that monopoly is so apparent to all men that not even the hideous blight of a Rockefeller indorsement could cast a cloud upon it.

VOTE FOR CHARLES J. KIDNEY

Charles J. Kidney is without doubt the best one of the four candidates who are running for Congress in the Tenth District. He is a successful business man, well known and popular.

Mr. Kidney has received assurances of support from Republicans and Democrats of influence and standing. He received a big vote last year when running for another office; this year he has a good chance to win.

If he is elected, Mr. Kidney will be a credit to the district and an efficient representative of Boston at the National Capital. No voter need hesitate to cast his ballot for him from fear that he will be "throwing away his vote."

Little Editorials from the People

HOW TO DEFEAT PARKER

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Voters in Wards 20 and 21, Boston, have an opportunity this year to drive one corporation man out of public life by defeating Aldermans W. Prentiss Parker for the Senate. A vote for Parker means a vote for government by special privilege.

Parker is employed as a clerk by Kidder, Peabody & Company. He is simply the political agent in office of that corporation which exercises such a powerful hold on many great interests in Boston. Kidder, Peabody & Company is the Boston banking agent of Standard Oil. Like that corporation, it knows the best way to entrench itself is to keep its own men in office (see "Some Letters I Wrote," by John Archbold).

If Alderman Parker sent the Northern avenue franchise to the secret Committee on Public Improvements when he saw it might be defeated in the open board. There it will lie till Mr. Parker gets his orders to "go ahead," the people are sleeping, we know our men, the franchise will pass," and protest before you know, unless the people keep awake, the Northern avenue bridge steal will have gone through, and the city will have given away to the New Haven corporation (in fiscal agents are this same Kidder, Peabody & Company) rights worth millions of dollars.

Drive out of public life W. Prentiss Parker, Kidder, Peabody & Company's clerk!

FREDERICK JONES.

Dorchester.

(One way to drive Alderman Parker out of public life is to vote for Washington A. Coles, Independence League candidate for the Senate against the Kidder-Peabody candidate. Mr. Coles is an honest, fearless man of the people. The fact that he is blind will not interfere with his rendering faithful and efficient service to the public in case he is elected.—Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN.)
